

Technology Resolutions for the New Year

1. Be patient with those who still have dial-up connections...and especially be patient when I have to use dial-up.
2. Clean up desktops (both physical and virtual).
3. Organize and archive my old materials (both paper and electronic).
4. Neatly bundle all the wires connecting modems, hubs, peripherals and other hardware on my desk (Do you notice a theme emerging here?)
5. Try to keep up with the new names of software acquired by Macromedia
6. Amaze clients and friends by knowing what all of the acronyms in the eLearning field really mean (and get extra snaps for knowing both meanings of “.asp”.)
7. Go through all of my “For Dummies” software manuals and learn each program in a linear fashion instead of just “intuitively” clicking..
8. Buy the color laser printer, or not...but, in either case, stop driving my colleagues crazy by obsessing over the pros and cons.
9. Cut back on eBay impulse purchases
10. Write at least one old fashioned letter to a friend using a pen, stationery and a USPS stamp!

...and a Happy New Year to all!
